5. Definitions

University International Travel is defined as travel that meets one or both of the following criteria:

- To a location outside of the United States; including U.S. territories.

AND

- Supported through funds disbursed by the University or a University-affiliated entity.

OR

- Regardless of funding source, meets at least one of the following criteria:
  - Undertaken by an enrolled undergraduate or graduate student and results in work that will be considered for academic credit or is otherwise related to a student's program of study, such as an international practicum, global health rotation, or clinical training or research.
  - Undertaken as part of a faculty, researcher, or staff member's job duties, including participation in events or programs funded by external sources resulting from the participant's affiliation with the University including grants and awards.
  - Related to or results from participation in any program offered by or coordinated through the University, including student club or recognized student organizations regardless of funding source.
  - Related to or in support of University operations not otherwise listed.

In addition to this policy, University Travel may be subject to additional policies, including, but not limited to, the University Travel Policy (managed by the Office of University Finance and Administration), Human Resources policies and all OFAC-related laws and restrictions that may be in effect (managed by the Office for Research and Export Control). University Travel for faculty, staff, students, groups, and University guests should be booked through the Travel and Expense program, either via Concur or by contacting Direct Travel.

High Risk travel is defined as travel to a country or region designated a Level 4 – Do Not Travel by the U.S. Department of state OR is subject to sanctions and restrictions by the U.S. Department of the Treasury – Office of Foreign Asset Control. No travel may commence until registration is complete and Export Control has reviewed the travel.

Undergraduate students are not permitted to travel to a country or region designated a Level 4- Do Not Travel. Additionally, undergraduate students seeking to travel to a country or region designated a Level 3 – Reconsider Travel, must petition for approval and complete pre-departure requirements prior to travel.

Graduate students are discouraged from travel to a country or region designated a Level 4- Do Not Travel. However, in rare cases where travel is necessary, graduate students must petition for approval and complete pre-departure requirements prior to travel.

6. The Policy

A. Policy Statement

The Global Travel Safety & Security office (GTS&S) is responsible for ensuring that University travel is conducted with a risk-based, intelligence-driven approach – one that strives to enable University travelers to travel safely, securely, and legally to as many places as possible.

To enable and advance teaching, learning, and service globally, travel outside of Rutgers campuses is necessary and encouraged. The University has responsibilities and obligations to fulfill when such travel is financially supported by the University or conducted by a traveler in their capacity as student, faculty member, staff, or guest of the University. To ensure fulfillment of these responsibilities and obligations, members of the University community managing, organizing, or participating in University Travel must adhere to the policy and the related processes and procedures contained in this document.

The policy helps the University have accurate location awareness of faculty, staff, and students traveling internationally and provides the ability to contact travelers in emergencies abroad.

B. Registering for Travel Outside the United States

Decisions to travel overseas should be made with an understanding of the current situation in the region/locations to be visited, and requires that travelers remain aware, informed, and prepared. In an effort to ensure the safety of faculty, staff, and students participating in international travel, the University has implemented a travel registration process for all international travel. All Rutgers faculty, staff, and students who are traveling outside the United States on University- sponsored travel are required to register with the Department of Risk Management prior to such travel.

Travelers must register separately for each international trip they make.

For student groups not traveling as part of Rutgers Global Study Abroad, travel registration for the group is the responsibility of the Group Leader.

For faculty and staff booking travel via Direct Travel or the Concur Online Travel Booking Tool, international travel registration is automatic, and no further action is required unless the destination is high risk.

All other University-sponsored international travelers (including faculty, staff, and students) may be enrolled through submission of the International Travel Registration Form, available via the Risk Management and Insurance website.

Registration is NOT required for personal (non-University) travel.

C. Emergency Travel Assistance and International Medical Insurance Emergency Travel Assistance

Accessing medical and emergency assistance can be difficult and expensive overseas, therefore the University requires that University-sponsored travelers must be enrolled in the Emergency Travel Assistance and International Medical Insurance Policy. Upon completion of international travel registration, travelers will be automatically eligible for an emergency travel assistance and medical insurance policy. Membership in the emergency assistance policy is provided at no charge to faculty, and staff, and students pay a small fee while undertaking University-sponsored travel. This policy is in addition to any domestic U.S. medical insurance a traveler is enrolled in, which must be maintained, as the assistance policy is for accidents and sudden onset of illness or injury, not routine medical or dental care.

Visit the Department of Risk Management and Insurance website for more information about the Emergency Travel Assistance policy.

For faculty and staff booking travel via Direct Travel or the Concur Online Travel Booking Tool, international travel health insurance is automatic, and no further action is required, unless the destination is high risk. All other University-sponsored travelers (including; faculty, staff, and students) may enroll by submitting the International Travel Registration form.
